INSIDE THE JEWELRY STORY, HOMER LOVETT WAITED...THE LONG MINUTES PASSING LIKE DAYS...IT WAS TIME FOR HIS RELIEF BUT HE CROUCHED, SILENTLY WAITING...

I WAS RIGHT! HE'S FORCING THE BACK WINDOW!

YOU PULLED ONE TOO MANY, WESTON! I'LL TAKE THAT STUFF!

LOVETT! WHERE IN... HOW DID YOU KNOW!

YOU'RE NOT TAKING ME!

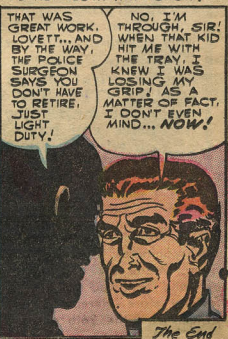

DON'T BE A FOOL! RI...

HOMER LOVETT WAS DAZED LONG ENOUGH FOR WESTON TO GET TO THE REAR WINDOW! LOVETT KNEW WHAT HE HAD TO DO...

I HOPE I DON'T MISS!

LATER IT WAS LEARNED THAT YOUNG WESTON HAD COMMITTED THE OTHER ROBBERIES! HE HAS A GOOD CHANCE OF REHABILITATION... AND HOMER LOVETT? HE RETIRED... WITH HONOR!

THAT WAS GREAT WORK, LOVETT... AND BY THE WAY, THE POLICE SURGEON SAYS YOU DON'T HAVE TO RETIRE, JUST LIGHT DUTY!

NO, I'M THROUGH, SIR! WHEN THAT KID HIT ME WITH THE TRAY, I KNEW I WAS LOSING MY GRIP! AS A MATTER OF FACT, I DON'T EVEN MIND... NOW!

The End

"JUST JEWELRY"

"My brother-in-law is crazy about fishing," declared Al Norton of Special Squad to his buddy, Ben Egan. "I think he would rather fish than eat. Last week he goes up to Byran Lake and catches a mess of fish. Came over to the house with half a dozen for us. Did the little woman thank him? Not on your life! She said if he wants to have the pleasure of catching fish, then he should clean them. Funny things; I mean women, not fish. I certainly enjoyed eating fresh fish. Think next time the brother-in-law goes fishing, I'll ask him to take me along."

"You can have my fishing outfit," replied Ben Egan. "That's the stuff I got from Joe for my birthday present. Got a hook through my finger when I used it. You just sit and feed the fish. Either a guy must have a lot of patience or be slightly nuts. After two hours of catching no fish, some wise guy comes up to me. I was fishing off the pier. Takes a look at my hooks. Says I would do better using bent pins."

The phone rang and Al Norton answered it. No need to continue on the topic of fishing.

"Chief Edward Mirkus wants us in his office at once. Says a jeweler was shot. Come on! We don't want to keep the Chief waiting."

The police chief was proud of the two members of his Special Squad. They could handle anything from the ordinary routine matters to the toughest assignment. The door to his office was open and they walked in.

"Special flash just came in over the wire," said the Chief. "You remember Frank Ritter? He was the jeweler who used to go up to the police range with us. Seven years ago he shot and killed a bandit in his jewelry shop who tried to rob him. And a year ago he chased a robber from the store amid a hail of bullets. This time he lost out to some killer. There's a precinct car at the jewelry store. A morgue wagon is on the way. Address is 489 Morley Avenue. Go and get the killer!"

Detective Al Norton drove the car and in twenty minutes, as a result of keeping his siren going, made the destination. He parked the car and followed by Ben Egan entered the jewelry store. Herman Simpson, a prowler officer from the 26th precinct was there.

"Hello Herman," greeted Al Norton. "Haven't seen you since they tried to stick up that gas station on the Boulevard. Fill us in on the details."

Frank Ritter's body lay only a couple of feet from his .38 Smith & Wesson revolver, in a counter drawer. His Belgian made automatic rested on its belted holster on a shelf. Ritter customarily wore the automatic on his hip and carried the gun in his pocket.

"He never had a chance to use either gun," pointed out Officer Herman Simpson. There's an empty ring tray on the counter. Guess the thief took the contents. There's also a little notice on the wall to call his wife in case of an accident. I took care of that matter. She's out shopping. Her sister went out looking for her. Down the corner they are excavating and that makes a lot of noise. Hence I figure whoever shot him didn't have to worry about somebody hearing the shot."

"Suppose we go out and see if we can find anybody who saw the killer run out of the store," suggested Al Norton to his buddy, Ben Egan.

"Why do you figure the killer ran out instead of walking out?" asked Officer Herman Simpson.

"The chances are the fellow didn't intend to come in and kill. Ritter probably tried to go for one of his guns. The fellow pulled the trigger. Grabbed the contents of the tray. Under those conditions he would do what would be natural. Not walk but run because of the unexpected element in the hold up. It was murder and you run away from it."

For the next two hours the detectives entered stores and questioned people. Outside of Moe's Appetizer Store they got their first break.

"I'm a window cleaner," explained a heavy stocky man who put down a pail and the rest of his equipment. I never heard a shot. But from that jewelry store I did see a man leave. What an outfit he wore. Striped pants. Like one of those fancy guys you see in the movies. Black shoes and spats. Then he has on a long black coat. I rub my eyes. I am dreaming. What is a guy all dressed up like this doing on Morley Avenue. He hurries around the corner and that's the end of him."

"Would you recognize him again if you saw him?" questioned Ben Egan.

"Bet your boots I would. Just put him in front of me and I'll pick him out for you. He had a big nose and bushy eyebrows. I'll give you my card. My name is Thomas Grant. If you need your windows cleaned, I do household jobs. Charge only thirty five cents a window."

The two detectives returned to Headquarters. They talked to Chief Edward Mirkus.

"We'll let Ballistics work on the bullet. See if you can find out what kind of a fellow would be wearing such an outfit. Go into a men's shop and speak to some expert."

Mr. Hubert Thawnley, of Thawnley & Finn eran, was most helpful as he listened to the situation of the two detectives.

"Your man might have been going to a morning wedding. Or he could be all dressed up that way as a greeter in a store. Or maybe he is one of the professionals in an undertaker's parlor."

"Let's start visiting undertaker's parlors and look for a fellow with a big nose and bushy eyebrows," suggested Al Norton.

"Got a better idea than that," ventured Ben Egan. "If we take this window cleaner with us, he ought to be able to spot our man."

At first Thomas Grant didn't like the idea too much. But then Al Norton pointed out that if they got the killer, Thomas Grant would get all the credit. And publicity could help the window washing business. He could then even raise his prices.

For the next three days they visited undertaking establishments. It was the thirty seventh visit that they struck pay dirt. Thomas Grant had been warned not to show any sign of recognition if he spotted his man. Outside the Undertaking Parlor of Hendricks & Hendricks, Thomas Grant spoke.

"I'll bet my last buck he's the fellow."

"Want to try the surprise routine on him," suggested Detective Al Norton to Ben Egan.

"Sure," was the reply.

So the two men reentered the Undertaking Parlor. Al Norton spoke.

"You gave us a figure for a funeral. What's your name?"

"Sidney Cerf," replied the man. "And I am certain you couldn't get a better funeral at any price than the one we give."

"What made you kill the jeweler and take all those rings? You certainly must have been crazy to think you could get away with it. Come on with us."

Sidney Cerf made a dive for the desk but Al Norton blocked him off. Ben Egan found the revolver.

"A .32 Colt. It was a .32 slug you pumped into Ritter. We'll let Ballistics do the comparing."

Sidney Cerf refused to talk when they brought him down to headquarters. But the next day when he saw the results of the comparison test run by Ballistics he admitted everything.

"I was losing heavy on the horses. Owed this bookie more than two grand. I had passed Ritter's store several times. Then I got the idea. I borrowed the gun we keep here. Took my boss' car. Parked it two blocks from the jewelry store. Went in and saw this tray full of diamond rings. Took the rings and warned the fool not to do anything. He went for a gun so I killed him. Really didn't want to. If you fellows hadn't found me I would have taken the rings to Boston and sold them."

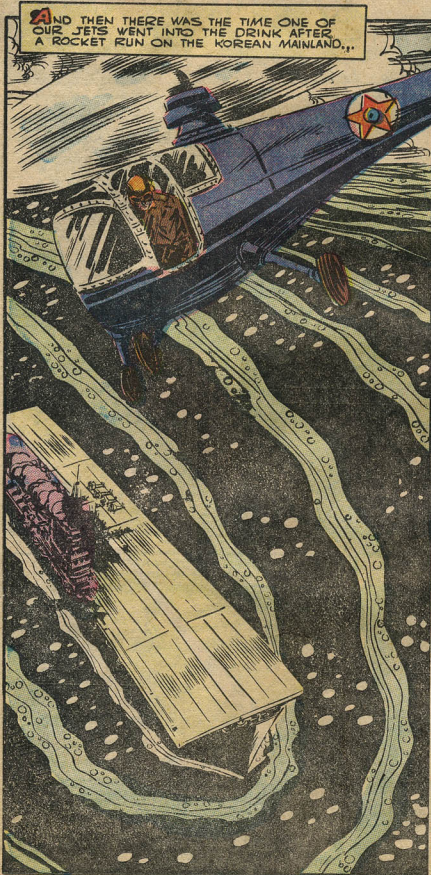

Al Norton laughed and Ben Egan just grinned. It upset the man who didn't see anything funny in the situation.

"You were the big fool," pointed out Detective Al Norton. "To think you could get away with it. But even if we didn't find you, those rings couldn't have helped you. Ritter made up that tray of rings with paste stones for a theatrical company. Bet you couldn't have hocked them for twenty dollars. And for that you will burn."

CHARLES ATLAS
Holder of title
The World's Most Perfectly
Developed Man.

PEOPLE used to laugh at my skinny 97-pound body. I was ashamed to strip for sports or for a swim. Girls made fun of me behind my back. THEN I discovered my body-building system "Dynamic Tension." It made me such a complete specimen of manhood that I hold the title, "The World's Most Perfectly Developed Man."

What's My Secret?

When you look in the mirror and see a healthy, husky, fellow smiling back at you — then you'll be astonished at how fast "Dynamic Tension" GETS RESULTS! It is the easy, NATURAL method and you can practice in the privacy of your own room — JUST 15 MINUTES EACH DAY. Just watch your scrawny chest and shoulder muscles begin to swell those spindly arms and legs of yours bulge and your whole body starts to feel "alive," full of zip and go! Thousands are becoming husky — my way. I give you no gadgets to fool with. With "Dynamic Tension" you simply utilize the dormant muscle-power in your own body — watch it grow and multiply into real solid LIVE MUSCLE.
